FOR PRIZE FOWL

REFUSES $1,000

Regent, a Rose Comb Black Minorca Cock, Is Valued at $166 a Pound.

FORTUNE FROM A DOZEN EGGS.

Awards to winners at Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock Show at the Fair Are Announced.

George H. Northup of Raceville, N. Y., refused $1,600 for Regent, a rose comb black Minorca cock, now on exhibition at the World's Fair Poultry Show in Barn No. 19. Importuned to put a price on Regent, Mr. Northrup said nothing less than $1,000 would buy him, and he was not particular about disposing of him at that price.

Regent is probably the most valuable pet fowl in the United States. He weighs nine pounds, and, accordingly, is valued by his owner at $166 a pound. Victor, the sire of Regent, was sold last March by Mr. Northrup to Henry Schultz von Schultzenstein of Berlin, Germany, for $1,000. At the same time he sold to the German fancier winey-two other rose comb black Minorcas for $4,000, one of the cocks bringing $500. Mr. Northrup is wealthy man, and his whole fortune came from a dozen rose comb black Miorea eggs, which he bought for $12. Craven, a Lakenvelder cock, and four nens, purchased from Lady Craven of Huddersfield, England, by Doctor A. H.

Huddersfield, England, by Doctor A. H. Phelps of Glenns Falls, N. Y., is on exhibition in barn, No. 17. Lady Craven is the most noted chicken fancier in England and her fowis bring large prices. Craven won first in his class in 1922 and 1993 in Antwerp and the Crystal Palace Show, London, and in the International Poultry Show at Birmingham, England.

Doctor Phelps also has a rare show of imported bantams of all varieties. "Jappy," a Japanese bantam cock, and Buster Brown, a barred Ply—outh Rock bantam, attract much attention. Doctor Phelps paid $50 for "Jappy" in Japan two years ago, and he has won first prizes in all the poultry shows of England and Europe, La Petita, a buff Cochin bantam, with legs less than an inch long and weighing fourteen ounces, is also among Doctor Phelps's rare birds. La Petita and her mate are imported and valued at $150.

It is the belief of Mr. George J. Kobusch, president, and also of Mr. George A. H. Mills, secretary and treasurer of the St. Louis Car Company, based on their intimate acquaintance with car building and the tendency of the industry, that it will be only a short time before stessm power will be superseded by electric power on railroads, when the type of heavy car now made for electric interurban transit by the St. Louis Car Company, with certain additions, will take the place of the locomotive and ender.

"We are indiding bottom frames and bodies that are adapted to long, heavy and speedy hauls," said President Kobusch. The St. Louis Car Company, having reached the highest point in the production of street cars, is now turning its attention to raliroad-car building, while at the same time continuing to produce the highest type of street car. The company has but a small span to bridge between the manufacture of street cars and raliroad cars, because of the natural trend which electric-car building has taken during the years of the company's greatest growth and development. That trend has been to-

The roof is of steel also, and it and the sides are wood-filled, to provide fastening for outside finish.
